PixSort Launch Playbook

Hormozi-style: Warm → Warm-ish → Cold April 2026

The #1 Rule Before Anything Else

You need one great asset before outreach fires.

A 30-second screen recording of PixSort actually working — messy camera roll going in, organized albums coming out. Before/after. This makes every message click instantly. Without it, outreach is abstract. With it, people get it immediately and want to share it.

This is the blocker. Build this first.

What We Know Before We Start

The Contact Pool

- ~250 warm contacts in Tiff's phone — untapped, ready to blast when app is stable
- ~62% female, ~32% male — skews toward the demographic most likely to care about photo organization
- Two Instagram accounts: one with 2K followers, one with 9K — both are distribution channels
- Tran's Skool community: ~1,000 creators, mix of newsletter + podcast audience — highest value, protect it

What Reddit Already Told Us (26 threads, 500+ comments)

We don't need customer interviews for the regular person segment. Reddit gave us unfiltered, unprompted truth: - Pain is real and widespread — 10K to 600K+ photos, years of backlog, most people have given up - People default to doing nothing — "I just use date order" / "People organize their photos?!" - Trigger moments — storage full, new phone, can't find a photo - Language they use — "I have a mess," "sooo f'in annoying," "I went mad" - Objection already identified — "I can just search my camera roll" (see below)

The #1 Objection to Handle

"I can just search my camera roll" Google Photos and Apple Photos do have search — so the surface objection is valid. Your answer:

> "Search tells you where something IS. PixSort tells you where everything SHOULD BE — automatically, without you thinking about it." This needs to be in messaging, App Store description, outreach — everywhere.

The Outreach Hierarchy

For every 20 cold contacts → maybe 1 reply. For every 20 warm contacts → 8-12 replies.

Always exhaust warm before going cold.

Pre-Launch: Customer Interviews (This Week, Parallel to Bug Fixes)

Don't let this gate your launch. Run these while cofounder fixes bugs.

Why Creators Only — Not Regular People

Reddit already validated the regular person segment. The 5 creator calls fill the one gap Reddit can't — whether creators feel this pain acutely enough to pay, and what language they use to describe it.

The 5 Calls

Emily, Tiffany, Cassandra, Tran, Char

These people already know you're building something — reframe the ask:

> "Hey, instead of testing the app, can I steal 10 minutes to ask you some questions about how you manage your photos and content? No pitch I promise — just want to understand your workflow."

The Interview Script (Mom Test — no pitching)

Open:

> "Tell me about your camera roll right now — how many photos do you think you have?"

Dig into behavior:

> "When's the last time you tried to find a specific photo or clip and had trouble?" "Do you ever organize your content files, or does that feel like too much work?" "Have you ever tried any app or method to deal with it? What happened?"

Dig into creator-specific pain:

> "When you're editing content, how do you find the clips you need?" "How long does that usually take?" "What would it mean for your workflow if that was instant?"

On the objection (ask this explicitly):

> "When I describe this to people, sometimes they say 'I can just search my camera roll.' What's your reaction to that?"

On value (only if they express real pain):

> "If something handled all of this automatically, what would that be worth to you — would you pay for it?"

Close:

> "Super helpful. Last question — who else do you know that deals with this that I should talk to?"

What to Listen For

- The exact words they use → steal for copy and messaging
- Whether they mention search → tells you how hard you need to push the counter-argument
- Emotional language ("stresses me out," "I just gave up") → your marketing hook
- Concrete stories ("I lost clips when I switched phones") → testimonial angles
- Whether pain is acute or just annoying → acute = they'll pay, annoying = they won't

What the Outcomes Mean

What you hear	What it means
3+ out of 5 describe real pain unprompted	Green light — messaging is right, launch confidently
Pain exists but feels manageable	Find higher-volume creators — your 5 may not be acute enough
No pain at all	Wrong 5 people, not product problem — Reddit confirms pain is real

3 out of 5 confirming pain = enough signal to launch.

Stage 1: HOT — Everyone You Know (Today, $0)

Expected response rate: 40-60% Expected conversion to post: 20-30%

Who

- Every creator Tiff personally texts or DMs
- TestFlight users: Tran, Emily, Tiffany, Jasmine, Han, Colleen
- Creator friends from Tiff's following list

The Text (copy-paste)

> Hey! So I've been building an app called PixSort — it uses AI to auto-organize your entire camera roll. Screenshots get separated, photos sorted into albums, duplicates cleaned up, all in like 2 minutes.
>
> I'm giving lifetime access to creators who post it on their story before we launch. Literally just a story post + tag @pixsort and you get it free forever.
>
> Want me to send you the link?

Follow-Up (after they say yes)

> Here's the TestFlight link: [INSERT LINK]
>
> Try organizing your camera roll first — it's wild seeing the before/after. If you screen record it that makes an amazing story. Just tag @pixsort and screenshot it for me and you're locked in for life 🤝

What to Tell Them to Post

> Honestly whatever feels natural! Some ideas: - Screen record your camera roll getting organized (the before/after is satisfying) - "Found this app that finally organized my 10K photos" with a screenshot - Quick story like "ok this is actually insane" with the app open
>
> Whatever you'd naturally post if you found something cool. Just tag @pixsort!

Ask for Referrals

After they engage: "Who else should try this?" One warm referral beats 20 cold DMs every time.

Stage 2: WARM — Adjacent Circles (This Week, $0)

Expected response rate: 15-25%

Who

- Tran's Skool community (hold until app is stable + you have 3+ story posts live)
- Friends of stage 1 creators — ask "who else should try this?"
- Any Facebook groups or Discords Tiff is already a member of

Timing Gate for Skool

Do NOT send to Skool until: - [ ] App is stable (no crashes, core flow works end to end) - [ ] 3+ story posts live from stage 1 outreach - [ ] App Store listing or landing page is live This is your biggest asset — don't burn it early.

Stage 3: WARM-ISH — Targeted Strangers (Week 2-3, $0)

Expected response rate: 5-15%

3a. Reddit (Start NOW — Don't Wait)

Don't post as PixSort. Comment as a real person. Use Tiff's or cofounder's personal Reddit account with post history. Comment genuinely — "I've been testing an app called PixSort..." from a real person never gets flagged. This is a founder sharing their product where it's relevant. Totally legitimate.

Start with these 3 threads this week:

Thread	Subreddit	Why
"Is there any AI app for organizing photos?"	r/PhotographyAdvice	120 comments, still getting traffic, literally asking for PixSort
"What do you use to organize your video clips & media?"	r/youtubers	Creator-specific, our #1 ICP
Organizing photos into albums	r/ios	iOS users actively looking

Then work through these:

Thread	Subreddit	Priority
"Apps to organize files?"	r/DataHoarder	High
Organizing photos, need help with albums/folders	r/ios	High
How do you organize your photos on iPhone	r/iphone	High
"Alternative app to organize Google Photos in albums"	r/googlephotos	High
"Trick for Organization" (archive workaround)	r/googlephotos	High
How do you all organize your pictures	r/GooglePixel	Medium
Cloud storage for photos	r/AskPhotography	Medium
Where do you store your photos	r/AskPhotography	Medium
"How do you guys organize your photos?"	r/AskReddit	Medium
Organizing photos (multiple threads)	r/photography	Medium
Best way to organize a photobook	r/organizing	Medium
Whatever happened to keeping pictures in photo albums	r/CasualConversation	Medium

Cadence: 3-5 comments per week. Vary your language every time. Engage in the thread first before mentioning PixSort.

Comment template (vary each time):

> I had this exact problem — thousands of photos, total chaos. Been testing an app called PixSort that uses AI to auto-sort everything into albums (screenshots separated, duplicates flagged). Still in beta but it handled my backlog in about 2 minutes. Worth checking out.

Set up Reddit keyword alerts (free via F5Bot): - "organize photos" in r/ios, r/iphone, r/photography - "camera roll" in r/ios, r/iphone, r/LifeProTips - "organize clips" in r/youtubers, r/NewTubers, r/VideoEditing - "photo organizer" across all subreddits

3b. UGC Coach Emails

Email template:

> Subject: Free tool for your UGC students — auto-organizes camera roll
>
> Hey [name],
>
> I'm Tiffany, founder of PixSort. We built an AI app that auto-organizes your camera roll — screenshots separated, clips sorted, duplicates removed. Takes about 2 minutes.
>
> Think your creators would love it since managing content files is one of those annoying bottlenecks nobody talks about. I'd love to offer free lifetime access for you + a code for your community.
>
> No sponsorship needed — just genuinely think it helps. Happy to send a TestFlight link.
> Tiffany

What We Learned From Customer Interviews

Completed interviews with real UGC creators and coaches. Key findings that shape the launch strategy.

ICP Sharpened — It's a Specific Type of Creator

Not all creators are the customer. The filter question:

> "Do you shoot multiple types of content on your phone and need to find specific clips later?"

Yes + frustrated = paying customer. Everything else = user at best.

Is the ICP: - UGC creators with multiple brand clients — different content categories on one phone - Lifestyle / day-in-life creators — shoot across contexts, need to find clips later - iPhone-first creators in the trenches: shooting, editing, posting themselves - Aspiring creators who invest in tools to accelerate their journey

Not the ICP: - Event-based creators (DJs, event photographers) — recency-first, no backlog - Social media managers who don't shoot their own content - Serial deleters with very low photo volumes - Casual users — feel pain but won't pay to solve it

Tran's Skool — Entry Strategy

Tran confirmed the playbook for how to enter her community:

Don't lead with the product. Lead with value. - Run a webinar or live walkthrough on content workflow generally - Topic framing: "How to organize your content and improve your workflow as a content creator" - Talk through the bottlenecks and pain points — introduce PixSort as the solution at the end - This is how other founders have successfully introduced apps to her community

Tran's intro approach: - Testing phase: no incentive needed — name drop Tran when reaching out, that's enough - Post inside Skool asking for volunteers, or DM active members directly (check leaderboard for recently active) - At launch: referral/affiliate model makes sense — referral code per creator

Skool community breakdown: - Beginner: 0–50 deals | Intermediate: 50–100 | Expert: 100+ with proven KPIs - ~300 expert/intermediate, majority are beginners - Target creators with 10K+ photos and less organized workflows — higher pain, higher conversion

Intros Tran offered: - Brianna — ex-agency, video editor, community leader inside Skool - Jenny — strong creator, getting back into content - Antoine — expert level - Amanda — strong fit

Future distribution via Tran: - She knows people with Facebook groups of 80,000+ creators - Referral/affiliate model unlocks this at scale — give her a code once launch is live

Objection Update — Apple Search Is Getting Worse

Two separate users mentioned unprompted that Apple's recent photo update made native search harder. The #1 objection — "I can just search my camera roll" — is weakening on its own. Add this to messaging:

> "Apple's latest update made photo search even harder. PixSort gives you organized albums so you never have to search in the first place."

Twitter/X — Underused Outreach Channel

Brand agencies post UGC job opportunities on Twitter. Creators pitch directly in replies. Hard sell is acceptable there — unlike Instagram or TikTok. Brands DM from reply threads.

Action: Add Twitter/X to outreach strategy. Search for brand agencies and creative strategists posting UGC opportunities. Engage in those threads.

Product Flags From Interviews (For Spencer)

1. Custom album creation — users want to define their own categories, not just accept AI defaults. Came up in multiple interviews independently.
2. iCloud-heavy users get a broken experience — most photos in iCloud = nothing to sort on-device. Need onboarding message: "Make sure your photos are downloaded before sorting."
3. Direct sharing to social from app — multiple users asked for Instagram posting without going back to camera roll.
4. Pets as a category — came up twice unprompted.
5. Re-sorting between categories — users want to move photos from one album to another manually.
