PixSort Outreach Kit

---

1. Text Blast to Creators (Copy & Paste Ready)

The Message (for creators Tiff knows personally)

> Hey! So I've been building an app called PixSort — it uses AI to auto-organize your entire camera roll. Screenshots get separated, photos sorted into albums, duplicates cleaned up, all in like 2 minutes.
>
> I'm giving lifetime access to creators who post it on their story before we launch. Literally just a story post + tag @pixsort and you get it free forever.
>
> Want me to send you the link?

Follow-Up (after they say yes)

> Here's the TestFlight link: [INSERT LINK]
>
> Try organizing your camera roll first — it's wild seeing the before/after. If you screen record it that makes an amazing story. Just tag @pixsort and screenshot it for me and you're locked in for life 🤝

If They Ask "What Should I Post?"

> Honestly whatever feels natural! Some ideas: - Screen record your camera roll getting organized (the before/after is satisfying) - "Found this app that finally organized my 10K photos" with a screenshot - Quick story like "ok this is actually insane" with the app open
>
> Whatever you'd naturally post if you found something cool. Just tag @pixsort!

2. UGC Coaches — Contact List

One recommendation from a coach = instant distribution to their entire student community. This is the highest-leverage outreach on this list.

Pitch Template (Email or DM)

> Subject: Free tool for your UGC students — auto-organizes camera roll
>
> Hey [name],
>
> I'm Tiffany, founder of PixSort. We built an AI app that auto-organizes your camera roll — screenshots separated, clips sorted, duplicates removed. Takes about 2 minutes.
>
> I think your students would love it since managing content files is one of those annoying bottlenecks nobody talks about. I'd love to offer:
>
> - Free lifetime access for you
> - A discount code for your students (or free access if you prefer)
>
> No sponsorship, no affiliate deal needed — just think it'd genuinely help. Happy to send a demo or TestFlight link.
>
> Tiffany

3. YouTubers to Reach Out To

These are creators who've already made content about organizing photos/content OR who make "tools I use" content. They'd promote PixSort because it genuinely solves their problem — not as a sponsorship.

Pitch Template (DM or Email)

> Hey [name]! I saw your [video/post] about [organizing content / your workflow]. We built an app called PixSort that auto-organizes your camera roll with AI — screenshots separated, clips sorted, everything searchable by what's in the photo/video.
>
> Would love to give you free lifetime access. No strings — if you like it, maybe mention it. If not, no worries at all. Just think it'd genuinely help your workflow.

The List

| Creator | Platform | Subscribers/Followers | Contact | Why Them |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Katie Steckly | YouTube (100K+), TikTok (76K) | 176K+ combined | Contact via katiesteckly.com | Already made a TikTok about camera roll organization for creators with 15K+ photos. Runs Creatorly Media (editing agency). Perfect fit — she lives this problem daily |
| Meredith Marsh (VidProMom) | YouTube | Mid-size creator channel | Contact via vidpromom.com | Wrote detailed guide on "How to Organize Video Files." Runs Thriving Creators Society community. Already teaching creators about file organization — PixSort is the tool she's been recommending workarounds for |
| Lavendaire (Aileen Xu) | YouTube (1.63M) | 1.63M+ subscribers | lavendaire@select.co (sponsorships), sara@lavendaire.com (podcast) | Made a video "How I Plan & Organize My Content for YouTube." Massive reach. Lifestyle/productivity niche = perfect audience overlap. Bigger creator so expectations may be different — but if she likes it organically, it's huge |
| Francie Outlaw | Blog + YouTube | Smaller creator | Contact via francieoutlaw.com | Wrote about her photo/video organization system — goes through camera roll every night. Active pain = active user. Smaller audience but highly engaged and authentic |

Creator "Tools I Use" Video Opportunity

Many mid-tier YouTubers (10K-100K subs) regularly post "tools I use" or "my creator setup" videos. These are organic promo opportunities — if PixSort is genuinely in their toolkit, they'll include it.

How to find more: Search YouTube for: - "tools I use as a content creator" - "my creator toolkit 2026" - "how I organize my content" - "apps every creator needs"

Look for creators with 10K-100K subs who respond to comments (means they'll respond to DMs too).

4. Reddit Threads — Ready to Comment In

These threads are still active (Reddit threads get new comments for years). Comment genuinely, don't spam. The template from the GTM playbook:

> I had this exact problem — thousands of photos, total chaos. Been testing an app called PixSort that uses AI to auto-sort everything into albums (screenshots separated, duplicates flagged). Still in beta but it handled my 15K photo backlog in about 2 minutes. Worth checking out.

High-Priority Threads (Most Active, Most Relevant)

Subreddits to Monitor for New Threads

Reddit Posting Cadence

- 3-5 comments per week (not per day — don't get flagged)
- Vary your language each time — don't copy-paste the same comment
- Engage genuinely in the thread first (reply to other comments) before mentioning PixSort
- Upvote and comment on other people's solutions too — builds credibility
